HOMESTEAD ANNEXATION DEFEATED BY THREE VOTES

A move to annex the Homestead district to San Mateo failed to carr yat an election Wednesday by the narrow margin of three potes. The contest was a long and bitter one, and one that has caused considerable hard feeling among opposing factions in the district since it was first proposed some months ago.

The matter was voted on at a previous election about six months ago at which time it was decisively defeated. It was thought, however, that the main differences had been adjusted, and that the measure would carrp at Wednesday's election. The vote, however, was found to be 44 for annexation and 47 against.

Now that the annexation move has been defeated, the residents of the Homestead district are urging the incirporation of Beresford, which will include this district.

Big Realty Tract To Be Subdivided

M. J. McKeown, a British Columbia capitalist for some time a resident of Atherton, has taken over the O'Keefe ranch at North Palo Alto for development and subdivision purposes for the owners, D. E. and James T. O'Keefe. The land will be placed on the market at once by Mr. McKeown, who is one of the best known subdividers in the state, having had a wide experience in British Columbia and on the peninsula.

The holding s one of the best known properties on the peninsula and has been in the possession of the O'Keefe family since 1879, when it was purchased by the late M. O'Keefe from Mrs. Eugene Casserly, whose husband was the United States Senator from California in the early seventies. Casserly became known to fame for his efforts and eloquence in defeating the bill introduced by an eastern senator to give Goat Island in San Francisco to the Central Pacific Railroad Company for a terminal. He was a brilliant lawyer and statesman. His brother-in-law, the late John T. Doyle, was his law partner and both men were leaders of the California bar and the ablest lawyers of their time. In the sixties they came down the peninsula buying large tracts of land, extending from the bay at Ravenswood to Menlo Park. These vast holdings have been cut up and are being subdivided in small parcels. The OKeefe farm is a part of these holdings and is about the last to to subdivided.

The property is beautifully wooded, nicely located and surrounded by paved roads. It fronts on Willow road, the main approach to the new Dumbarton bridge and through it runs the proposed Bayshore boulevard. To the rear is North Palo Alto, a rapidly growing and flourishing district of pretty homes. There is no doubt that this property will sell like "hot cakes."

The ranch was leased to the government during the war for a remount station. Here a little village sprung up over night and for a while ten thousand horses were located and trained there. for action over seas. Many boat loads were shipped across the ocean. After the armistice the horses and houses were removed. Vast crops of mushrooms were gathered by Japanese who in 1920 cleaned up the tidy sum of $20,000 and a similar sum the years following. This will give an idea of the fertility of the soil.

The streets constructed on the tract by the government will be used by Mr. McKeown in his work of subdividing.

Many reqests have been made for choice sites in the tract which shows how popular the property is and how it will sell when once placed on the market.

Selling will start today. Get in on the ground floor while the property is in reach of every one. When the bridge is opened the price will airplane.

The property will be highly restricted.

Trained Clerks Who Know the Goods They Sell

The salesman is the most intimate contact between the buyer and the seller. In realization of this important business truth, the Redwood City merchants and business men, by the process of elimination, have in their employ only those salespeople whose experience and character fit them to meet the buying public and with confidence. It takes either a super-salesman or a 'beautiful' liar to sell goods of which he has only a superficial knowledge. Knowledge of the process of manufacture, of the materials used and other necessary information can only be had by experience; and the ability to tell the truth regardless of whether it makes a sale or not, are the requirements of a good salesman. As the buying public comes to realize that the Redwood City business houses have equipped themselves with this type of salesforce, in their desire to give permanent satisfaction, they will also realize that here is another good reason why they should 'BUY AT HOME.'

Need Of More Highways Seen

In a letter sent recently to the board of trustees of Burlingame is regard to widening the highway, M. M. O'Shaughnessy, city engineer of San Francisco, expresses the belief that within the near future at least, ten highwys will be necessary to handle the traffic which will be found on the peninsula.

In his letter O'Shaughnessy says in part:

"I feel that your Board has small conception of what your future needs for highways in San Mateo will be. Three highways will be absolutely inadequate to handle the north and south traffic. It will take possibly from seven to ten highways.

"I am fully convinced of the desirability of extending your city planning features so as to restrict building on the 30-foot strips on each side of your present main State Highway, as this has the advantage of being the first choice of location, located along the best route, and will always carry the most traffic.

"If a little precaution is now taken in safeguarding those 30-foot strips it will save vast sums in the future. I recall this highway 40 years ago when there were not over a dozen houses fronting it between San Francisco County and San Mateo. Witness the difficulty the City and the State authorities have had recently in acquiring rights of way for widening the State Highway through the "bottleneck" from Colma, past the cemeteries, to a width of 124 feet 7300 feet long. It has taken us over a year to accomplish all this preliminary work, which means setting back monuments, gateways and other works of the hands of man that have been placed on each side of the present 60-foot road.

"They all have had to be set back and I think the future business down the peninsula will become so dense on this highway that even the trees will have to go. I am not saying one word in criticism of trees. I have possibly planted more trees individually than any citizen of California and love them, but when a matter of traffic need comes up neither trees nor monuments may obstruct public business. Witness the sawing off on Broadway, New York, of columns from the front of buildings that projected on the public street.

"I see nothing but grief in front of the proposed future road builders in San Mateo who start building a road parallel to your main highway a thousand feet or quarter of mile west. Improvements will be so advanced and present so many obstacles that the project of laying out this road is going to be a very difficult one."

PROJECT VIEWED BY C. OF C.

A large delegation of members from Redwood City and San Carlos Chambers of Commerce took advantage of an invitation offered by the officials of the Bay Terminals Corporation to view the work now in progress at Port San Francisco. About forty members of the local body attended and were shown the work which has been done and had explained to them the plans which involve the expenditure of about $4,000,000 in the development of a deep water harbor and industrial site.

On board the barge which is at work dredging the harbor, an elaborate dinner had been prepared by the officials of he company and the visitors were royally entertained.

At present a large clam shell dredger is busy, working 24 hours a day preparing a channel and basin in which the giant suction dredge which is to arrive about the first of the year, will operate. The suction dredge will be employed to cut a channel 300 feet wide and 30 feet deep for a distance of three miles through the tract, together with turning basins at intervals capable of accomodating ocean-going ships.

A levee building dredge is now at work building levees around the tract being developed, and soon work will be started in filling in the parts of this land to form a level tract of factory sites well above high water level.

NEW INDUSTRY STARTS BUILDING IN SAN CARLOS

Building operations were started this week on the plant of the California Concrete Products Co. on the marsh west of San Carlos. A large plant is to be erected, and the company will then begin the manufacture of concrete blocks, pipe and other products.

Near the new plant the Southern Pacific began construction this week of two spur tracks leading to the bay development project of Port San Francisco.

LAST SPLICE OF NEW TELEPHONE CABLE LINKS SAN FRANCISCO AND BAY AREA WITH SACRAMENTO

THE new long distance telephone cable of The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, between the San Francisco Bay area and Sacramento was formally dedicated Thursday, October 28, when G. W. Peltier, president of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, and Clay Miller, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, exchanged greetings for their respective cities, in the first call routed through the new cable. Earlier in the day the last splice in the big cable was made at Cordelia, with public and company officials participating.

This cable, costing in the neighborhood of $2,500,000, had its initial inception in 1923, and has been under active construction for the past 12 months. It was conceived and completed in order to meet the constantly increasing service demands which have come about as the result of the growth of the Bay Region and Sacramento and environs. The long distance cable spans a distance of 90 miles and is routed by way of Oakland, Crockett and Carquinez Straits to Sacramento. It carries 275 talking lines between the Bay Area and Crockett and 135 talking lines through to Sacramento. This number of lines can and will be materially increased as occasion may require and will eventually care for all service to-Sacramento and points north and east as far as Portland, Seattle, Chicago and New York.

Forty thousand miles of wire, or enough to go more than one and one-half times around the earth are contained in this cable; it weighs about 2,000 tons and is suspended upon 2,000 poles. A specially constructed building at Crockett will house approximately 100 repeaters. The function of these repeaters or boosters is to so boost conversations over the wires as to make audability comparable with local calls of shorter distances. Four separate sections of specially designed submarine telephone cable are included in the construction, two in San Francisco Bay, one across Carquinez Straits and one across the Sacramento River at Sacramento.

The service demands between the San Francisco metropolitan area, Sacramento and tributary points have steadily increased during the past few years and in order to provide equipment for the growth in this territory, telephone experts have made every endeavor to plan ahead in order to meet the resulting requirements, which are fulfilled by this project.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Completion of the new long-distance telephone cable of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company between the San Francisco Bay area and Sacramento was celebrated recently when the last splice in the big cable was made at Cordelia. Company and public officials participated in the exercises. Approximately $2,500,000 has been spent on the new line, which is 90 miles long and carries 275 talking lines between the Bay area and Crockett and 135 talking lines through to Sacramento. Enough wire to circle the earth one and one-half times is contained in this cable, which weighs about 2,000 tons and is supported upon 2,000 poles.

Despite the generally held theory that Chinese are extensive users of narcotic drugs, the state narcotic report, which will be submitted to the Legislature this winter, indicates that Americans and Mexicans constitute by far the largest percentage of "dope" adicts in California. A survey of narcotic law convictions over a period of six months in Los Angeles disclosed that 38.5 per cent of total violators were Mexicans and that 27.5 per cent were white Americans. For the same period 18 per cent were found to be American negroes, while the Chinese totaled only 13 per cent. Other nationalities made up a balance of 3 per cent.

There is under construction at the college of agriculture, Davis, a new type of earth building known as "pice-de-terre," or rammed earth. This building material is centuries old, having been used in many countries. However, due to the abundance of other building materials it has never been very popular in this country. There are, though, a few buildings especially on the Atlantic Coast where this type of construction was used.

H. Dana Bowers, in charge of the grounds at the University Farm at Davis, says there is a very simple and speedy method of establihing a lawn on terrace and slopes. This has always been a difficult problem, due to fact that it is hard to keep the seed in one place long enough for it to take root. However, in place of seeding, or using sod, the sack or burlap method of establishing the lawn is both quicker and easier.

All the members of the Ojai chick raising club of boys at Ventura attended the annual convention of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs at Davis in October. They returned, inspired by their visit to the State Agricultural Farm and say they expect to make greater progress during the coming year.

John S. Taylor, now Santa Rosa's oldest citizen at 98, went to the polls to vote for candidates and amendments. This has become something of a habit with Taylor. He has gone to the polls without missing an election of any kind at a general, state, county, city, school district or township for 76 years.

One of the scarcest things to be found in a state penitentiary is a fat criminal. Making this claim B. B. Meek of Oroville, former member of the State Board of Prison Directors, declared that during his eight years as one of state parole agency he observed over 4,000 convicts at Folsom and San Quentin prisons and saw only one actual fat man among them.

Scientific information gained during the World War is being used at Turlock, in an experiment in the extermination of noxious weeds. Master Sergeant F. M. Nash of the chemical warfare service is trying out chlorine gas as a means of eradicating Japanese heliotrope or "blue weed." Holes twenty inches deep are drilled in the ground and blown. Chlorine gas is then introduced into the shaken lower levels by means of a hose. By next year it will be possible to determine whether or not the deep roots of the weed pest have been killed.

We produce only Quality Printing. Whether you want an inexpensive handbill or letterhead in colors, if you order it from us you will be sure of getting good work. We have the equipment and the "know how" that enables us to get out really good printing—printing that will impress people with the good taste of its users. That is the only kind of printing that

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President Coolidge Links American High Wages and Prosperity.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, addressing the American Association of Advertising Agencies, and, through radio, many millions of other citizens, declared that our system of high wages is one of the chief factors in the nation's prosperity. He said it has brought about the "greatest distribution of wealth that the world has ever seen and provides the enormous capacity for the consumption of the kinds of commodities which characterizes our country."

"If we proceed under our present system," he added, "there would appear to be little reason to doubt that we can continue to maintain all of our high standards in wages, in output and in consumption indefinitely with our home markets as a foundation, increase our foreign commerce in the greater exchange of those commodities in which we are peculiarly adapted for the commodities of other nations in which they have a special advantage. But nothing would appear more plainer than that this all depends upon the maintenance of our American scale of wages, which is the direct support of our home market."

The Chief Executive made an appeal for exact truth in advertising, and commented the advertising profession for its contribution to a happy and prosperous country, adding that without constant publicity modern business could not be conducted on the present gigantic scale.

TITLE to the Chemical Foundation, Inc., of German patents seized during the war, is declared by the United States Supreme court to have been in accordance with the law, authorized by acts of congress and of President Wilson, and therefore valid. The government in its suit had alleged that the price paid for the patents—$250,000—was wholly inadequate and should have been at least $7,000,000. The court finds the Chemical Foundation was properly formed as in effect a public trust for those whom the patents would benefit and for the protection of American industries and that in the sale of the patents no conspiracy, fraud or deception was established by the government.

IF THE federal trade commission does not object, one of the biggest industrial combinations of recent years probably will be consummated shortly. This is the merger of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Montgomery Ward & Co., the huge Chicago mail-order houses. It is understood an outline of the plan already has been laid before Secretary of Commerce Hoover and that he said his opinion was that the government would consent to the merger. The tentative plan is said to call for the formation of a new corporation to absorb the present companies in exchange of stock of the concerns for that of the old ones. The proposed corporation would have assets of about $230,000,000, and an annual business volume approximating $400,000,000. It is estimated the merger would effect a saving of ten to fifteen millions a year in operating expenses. The largest interest in Sears, Roebuck & Co. is held by Julius Rosenwald of Chicago and in Montgomery Ward & Co. by the J. P. Morgan-First National bank group of New York.

FURTHER information comes concerning the recent earthquakes in Armenia the disaster stands as one of the worst of recent years. The death list increases steadily and may run into the thousands. The city of Leninakan and numerous other towns were ruined and probably 100,000 persons were rendered homeless. The Near East relief workers in the Caucasus under the direction of Dr. Joseph Beach are caring for many of the destitute, and the government of Russia has sent a large sum of money for relief purposes. None of the Americans there were killed or injured, and the thousands of orphans for whom they care also escaped unhurt.

PROSPECTS for international reduction of armaments in the near future are mighty poor, and it may be the proposed plenary conference for that purpose will not be held. In the preparatory conference at Geneva last week the delegations of nine of the seventeen nations represented made an official declaration that commercial fleets, trained reserves of armies, navies and air services, and war materials in reserve belong to "war potentials" and therefore are incapable of limitation or disarmament. The nine nations are France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugo-Slavia, Rumania and Argentina. Opposed to them, but in a minority, are Great Britain, the United States, Spain, Germany, Chile, Finland, Sweden and Holland. Both views will be presented to the plenary preparatory committee which is expected to meet in February or March.

EFFORTS of Lawrence Dennis, American charge d'affaires in Nicaragua, to bring peace to that country seem of no avail. The conference of leaders which he called broke up when the Liberals walked out with the declaration that they would continue their revolutionary movement with the aid of Mexico. The United States naval men returned from Corinto to the warship Denver, having been assured that there would be no reprisals against the Liberals there. A permanent neutral zone was established at Bluefields and El Bluff to protect American business. Meanwhile there were several "battles" at as many places between the opposing factions. Mr. Dennis is said to have demanded that General Chamorro, de facto president, quit immediately and that congress be called to install a new president, probably Adolfo Diaz.

Revolutionists in Honduras released a lot of penitentiary convicts and with their aid seized the town of Seiba from government forces and burned the courthouse.

BELGIAN money went on a gold basis last week with the creation of a new monetary standard, the belga, which is equal to five paper francs. Supporting the Belgian stabilization program, the United States absorbed half of a $100,000,000 international loan, and, through the federal reserve banks, participated in a credit of $35,000,000.

SENATOR REED was not satisfied with the information concerning the klan and Indiana's senatorial campaign which he obtained in Chicago and Indianapolis, so in St. Louis he resumed the inquiry, seeking especially more facts concerning a conference of high klan officials in Washington last January which, it has been asserted, was attended by Senator Watson. It was at this meeting that Walter F. Bossert resigned as grand dragon of Indiana because, according to several witnesses, he would not support Watson.

D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon who is serving a life term for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, has not yet made public the alleged proofs of political corruption and klan control in Indiana, but his appeal from his sentence has been filed and his attorney says there will shortly be developments in the case of a startling nature.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI is not having things all his own way in Italy, as has been generally supposed. The opposition to reform the senate which was a part of his plan for a "Fascist state" is so strong that it has been abandoned and the senate will be left unchanged. Instead labor and capital will have representation in the legislative branch through appointments to the chamber of deputies. Three hundred such deputies will be chosen, and the rest of the chamber will be elected by a plurality system. The voters will be given two lists of candidates, one from the Fascist party and one from the united opposition. Representatives of the Fascist corporations as they become experienced in government would become eligible to appointment to the senate.

QUEEN MARIE of Rumania, denying the repeated rumors that her royal husband had ordered her to return home, continued on her merry way through America. After reviewing the cadets at West Point and admiring Niagara Falls, she moved on into Canada and was enthusiastically received by Toronto, Montreal, Quebec and other cities. One discordant feature was the attitude of the Ukrainians who are numerous in the Dominion. In Toronto they presented a petition protesting against the treatment accorded Ukrainians in Rumania, and in Winnipeg they made formal objection to participation by the Manitoba government in the reception to the queen.

ONE long standing dispute between the executive and the legislative branches of the government was ended last week when the United States Supreme court in a majority opinion upheld the authority of the President to remove executive appointees without the consent of the senate. The court ruled that federal statutes cited to the contrary are void and denied to congress the constitutional right to restrict the President in the removal of officers from posts it created.

The opinion is the result of a suit brought by Frank S. Myers, former postmaster at Portland Ore., who was removed by President Wilson and who sought to recover back salary on the ground that his removal was illegal without the consent of the senate, which had ratified his appointment. Justices Holmes, Brandeis and McReynolds took radical exceptions to the opinion of their colleagues, and in a separate opinion Justice McReynolds declared that the majority views are "revolutionary."

GREAT BRITAIN announced new regulations restricting the export of rubber from Ceylon and Malaya for next year, to go into effect on November 1. By these regulations it appears probable that the coming quarter will see a reduction of the exportable allowance from the present 100 per cent to 80 per cent. The average price of rubber for the current quarter up to October 20 was 20.149 pence (about 40 cents) and the average must exceed 21 pence to justify continuance of the 100 per cent standard of exports.

It is recognized in the rubber market in London that the situation still is dominated largely by the United States and depends to some extent on the growth of the motor industry in America, and that, although in the current year production exceeded consumption by roughly, 40,000 tons, such surplus would be none too high if the American motor industry developed as expected.

Everett G. Holt, chief of the rubber division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in Washington, says in his annual report that defensive measures in the United States against British rubber control have resulted in large savings to the American people.

AROUSED by repeated robberies of the mails, accompanied often by the killing or wounding of postal employees, the government has again put the mails under guard of the marines, who have orders to shoot to kill whenever they see any bandits. Furthermore the "devil dogs" have been armed with the new Thompson machine gun that already has been adopted by the gunmen of Chicago in their gang warfare. It is a formidable weapon, easily handled and capable of firing 400 aimed shots a minute.

REPRESENTATIVES of the United Spanish War Veterans of the Middle West met in Chicago and made plans for a unified legislative program to be presented to the state governments of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin and Missouri. The legislatures are to be asked for payment of a bonus to every living veteran of the Spanish war and the expeditions to the Philippines and China on the same terms as the bonus to veterans of the World war; the appointment of state commissions of war veterans to administer state institutions caring for war veterans, and the establishment of state military cemeteries. Tax exemption up to $2,500 for veterans will be asked.

American Money Sent to Stricken Armenia

Dispatch of funds for relief work in Leninakan, Armenia, where an earthquake worked havoc, with scores killed or buried alive and thousands injured, was started by the Near East relief.

A sum of $5,000 was cabled to the stricken area as the initial relief contribution, and a nation-wide appeal for funds was telegraphed to all state committees of the Near East relief. The amount to be raised will be decided when relief workers in the field advise their headquarters of the extent of the needs for immediate relief and rehabilitation.

Officials of the Near East relief said that the need of its assistance came at an unfortunate time, as the organization's financial report on October 1 showed a deficit of $137,000. E. C. Miller, acting treasurer, said this was "due largely to delays of more than a year in collecting claims of $300,000 due from American fire insurance companies as a result of losses sustained in the burning of the Greek warehouses of the relief organization in Piraeus 15 months ago."

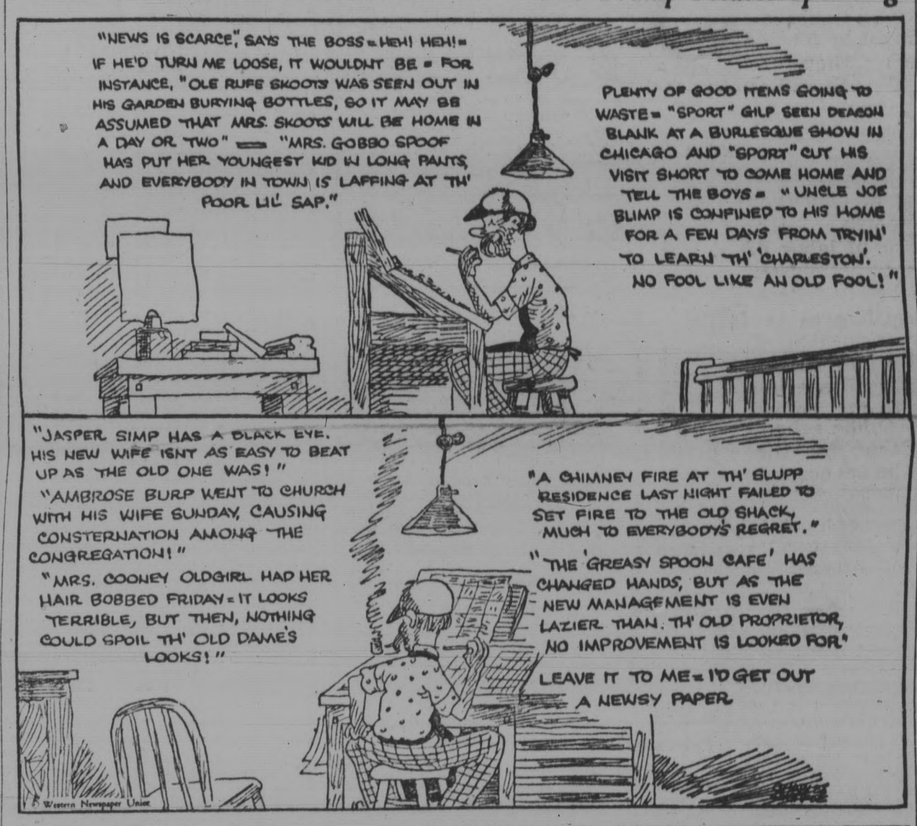

Leninakan, center of the disastrous earthquake, is located at the foot of Mount Ararat and is the metropolis of Russian Armenia. For several years it has been the chief center of Near East relief work in Armenia and is the site of the largest orphanage in the world, caring for 15,000 orphans and maintained by the Near East relief.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean that you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

Profanity Not Known Among Sioux Indians

Cursing is impossible in the Sioux language. According to Dr. E. Ashley, veteran Episcopal missionary among the Sioux Indians, blasphemous and profane speech is unknown in their tongue. Their imprecations, he says, are limited to a flick of the middle finger. Pointing out that the tribe name Dekotah means "Friendly People," he thinks the life of the tribe flowed so smoothly, and they offered so little resistance to its course, that no need for profanity existed. "The reputed stoicism of the red man and his silence in stalking game or making war," he declares, "do not explain the absence of profanity from the tongue. There is no word or expression in the Sioux tongue even to convey the damning of an enemy. A flick of the middle finger, resembling the snapping of an arrow and denoting scorn, is the ultimate in condemnatory gestures."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Education Week

THROUGHOUT the United States this week has been observed as Education Week or Public Schools Week. This week was inaugurated for the purpose of bringing before the general public annually the needs of, and the purposes of the public school.

Working quietly and unostentaciously in every community the public school is effecting a work which seldom comes to the notice of the general public, and yet a work which is most vital to the development of this nation and the maintainance of its institutions.

Within the schools of the nation must be formed the future citizens of this country, and just how good and intelligent, how liberal minded and law abiding those citizens will be, depends now, to a large extent, upon the schools. The schools are doing their best, but all schools are not given the same opportunity to give the same training to their charges. In some states, our own for instance, children are given ten months of schooling a year; in other states they receive only five. Children from those districts are handicapped when in competition with children from more favored sections.

And we have said, in the school must be formed the citizen of the nation. The schooling, therefore, appears to be a question of national rather than sectional importance. It is time that the nation demanded that all its future citizens be given a fair chance and a square deal.

For this reason, during Public School Week, the matter of a federal department of education has been brought again before the people. There is a federal department of agriculture, of labor, of war, and of commerce; yet the most vital industry of the nation is entirely neglected by the federal government. Believing that the best interests of the national can be served by the formation of such a department, individuals and organizations interested in the promotion of better citizenship have inaugurated Eudcation Week to put before the general public the needs of the public school throughout the nation. We hope that for the good of our country their efforts may be successful.

ONE-THIRD MILE CABLE TO BE LAID

Approximately $24,000.00 will be expended throughout Redwood City is a project which The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company is now engaged there.

The propect provides for the placing of approximately one-third of a mile of underground cable, containing 1212 pairs of wires and 3 1-2 miles of aerial cable, ranging in size from 26 pairs to 101 pairs. An additional central office entrance cable will also be provided to care for these additions. A 1212 pair underground cable is to be placed from the Redwood City telephone exchange to a new manhole on Webster street, located in front of the office. From this point, it will follow the present conduit system to the intersection of East Marshall and Willow streets. Another 1212 pair underground cable is to be placed from the central office manhole south to the intersection of Phelps and Main streets.

An aerial cable, containing 51 pairs of wires, will be extended from the end of the present cable at Eaton avenue and Alameda de las Pulgas, west along Eaton avenue, a distance of about 2700 feet. An aerial cable, containing 101 pairs of wires is to be placed from Jeter street to Ashley avenue. A 51-pair aerial cable is to be placed on Woodside road, from Albion avenue to King Mountain road, and a similar cable will be extended from the present cable at Canyon road in the Emerald Lake Area, 2500 feet west to Oak Knoll Drive at the south end of Emerald Lake.

A similar sized cable will be placed on Selby Lane from the highway south to Arlington avenue.

In addition to the above, there will be several minor distributing aerial cables placed as follows:

In the block between Iris and Hudson avenues, from Brewster street to Hopkins street; on Cascia street, from Phelps street to Heller street on Middlefield road, from 8th avenue to 9th avenue, then east on 9th avenue to Oak Drive avenue in the block between the State Highway and the Southern Pacific Railway Company, from Brewster street to Broadway; and in the block between Clinton and Duane streets, from Whipple to Hopkins street.

According to J. D. Worthington, manager of the Telephone Company here, this work will be completed during the latter part of December, 1926, and is necessitated by the rapid expansion of Redwood City. When completed, the work will care for the present rapid expansion and will provide for greater future expansion as is estimated by the engineers of the Telephone Company.

PENNINGTON VICTOR IN BELMONT RECOUNT

Winning the fifth place on the board of trustees of the recently incorporated town of Belmont, Thomas Pennington was this week declared elected by one vote. At the time of the election Pennington and George Roussel were each given 89 votes in the count, thus making a tie for the fifth membership of the board, John J. O'Brien was given 87 votes in the same count.

In order to avoid the necessity of a second election, Pennington, through his attorney, Hugh Gordon of San Fracisco, filed suit for a recount, alledging that he had received more votes than had Roussel. Before this action was heard O'Brien through Attorneys Ross and Ross of this city, field a second recount proceedings, alledging that he had received more votes than either Pennington or Roussel.

The recount was heard on Wednesday, and as a final result Pennington was found to have gained three votes and Roussel two. This made Pennington winner by one vote. O'Brien's total remained unchanged. The other members of the board of trustees of Belmont are H. C.Warren, C. J. Messner, C. L. Jordan and Lewis Vannier.

The board was to have met for an organization meeting last week but owing to the fact that two of the four men elected, were absent, the board could not act. Now with the recount out of the way, it is probable that the board will organize on Wednesday evening.

Peach Twigs and Scientific Planning

THE peach twig dips downward, so many believe, when held over underground water supplies. So firm is the faith of some people in its supposed infallability that they never undertake the labor and expense of digging a well without making a test for hidden water with this natural divining rod.

In preparing for the growth of telephone facilities to meet future demands, there is no peach-twig substitute for foresight. All expenditures of labor and money must be based on scientific planning. Careful studies must be made of present and future conditions in the locality to be served. Probable population and the volume and nature of telephone traffic must be estimated years ahead. Plant must be made capable of expansion. Capital must be arranged for in advance if growth is not to be delayed.

One of the vital phases of the Bell System's task of providing America with a nation-wide, universal service is that of foreseeing and providing for the future needs of the nation.

CIVIC PATRIOTISM

HE man who makes his daily round, uttering the old complaint of living in a "Dead Town," invariably has the wrong viewpoint. The real trouble is that he, himself, is the dead one. He sn't keep pace with his town, in fact, doesn't know just how much life his town has.

Whenever you find such a citizen, ninety-nine times out of a hundred you will find a man is doing nothing to make his town a good town. He will be the man who buys his goods a mail-order house, or goes to the nearest city to purchase no better commodities at such ice; that when his expenses are figured out he will have paid more than if he had staid at e and patronized his home merchants; he will have paid "too much for his whistle."

The making of a good town requires the utmost in co-operation on the part of all concerned. quires public-spirited merchants and business men and a public that will show its appre- on of this public spirit by generous patronage.

The prosperity of a city depends as much upon this condition as any other to be found in life of a community.

Have you ever considered the number of business houses in Redwood City that have been for ten years or more? Have you ever considered what these men have meant to Red- d City? Have you ever thought of the honest goods at honest prices these men have dis- ed during that time? Do you realize the thousands of dollars they have expended on s and improvements?

Why not spend your money with these men so that it will stay in Redwood City? It will in be spent with others in the city and this money means employment for others; necessities a share of the luxuries for their families. And thus a happy community is built.

Think it over, you who have thoughtlessly spent Redwood City money in other cities. Red- d City needs you, she needs us all!

What will make Redwood City bigger and better? Industry, manufacturing, agriculture, olls.

BUT it is one question to get them and quite another to keep them. One trade analysist ntly said: "The quicker we learn how to keep and take proper care of our industrial ac- tions, the easier it will be for us to secure them.."

The GIRL in the MIRROR

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

STORY FROM THE START

Laurie Devon, a gay young chap somewhat inclined to wildness, has recently succeeded as a playwright. His wealthy sister Barbara, who has helped him to succeed, has just been married and is going to Japan, leaving Laurie on his own. Epstein and Bangs, his theatrical partners, have promised Barbara to keep an eye on Laurie. They scold him for his laziness of late, and he retorts that he seeks adventure. From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite. From the elevator boy in the girl's house Laurie learns the girl's name is Mayo. Again in the mirror's reflection he sees her with a revolver and fears she means to commit suicide. He rushes into her apartment, and, winning her confidence, induces her to lunch with him, though she warns him of danger. At lunch she admits there is a mystery in her life. She says also that her funds are almost exhausted, but refuses flatly Laurie's offer of financial help. As a stranger enters the restaurant, the girl mutters "He has found me." Upon learning that the man has no claim on her, Laurie warns the stranger not to molest the girl, whose name, Laurie learns, is Doris. To Louise Ordway, his invalid sister-in-law, Laurie admits his interest in Doris.

"Bob didn't know," she said. "If he had felt the least suspicion he wouldn't have gone so far, or for so long. I thought I had three or four months—"

Laurie bent and kissed her cheek. "I'm coming in every day," he said, and abruptly left the room.

In the lower hall he stopped to take in the full real realization of what he had discovered. Louise, superb, arrogant, beautiful Louise, was really ill, desperately ill. A feeling of remorse mingled with his sense of shock. He had believed her a sort of nervous hypochondriac. He had so resented her excessive demands on Barbara that it was only since he had seen much of her in this last month that he had been able wholeheartedly to like and admire her.

As he stood silent, he become conscious of another presence—an august, impressive one, familiar in the past but veiled now, as it were, in a midst of human emotion. It was Jepson, the butler. He coughed humbly.

"Hexcuse me, sir," he faltered. "But Mrs. Hordway h'ain't quite so well lately, sir. 'Ave you hobserved that?"

Laurie nodded. "I noticed it today," he admitted.

"She's losin' strength very fast, sir. Hall of us 'as seen it. Cook says she don't eat nothing. And Susanne and the nurse says it's 'ard work to get 'er from the bed to 'er chair—"

Laurie checked these revelations.

"Has the doctor been here today?"

"Yessir, two of 'em 'ave been 'ere. Doctor Speyer comes hevery day. This morning 'e brought Doctor Haines again. Hit's very hupsetting, sir, with 'er brother away and hall."

The man was genuinely anxious. Laurie tried to reassure him.

"She may be better in a day or two," he said, more buoyantly than he felt. "But I'll come in every day. And here's my telephone number. If anything goes wrong, call me up immediately. Leave a message if I'm not there."

"Yessir. Thank you, sir." Jepson was pathetically grateful and relieved. He had the English servant's characteristic need of sanction and authority.

When Laurie reached his rooms, he called Sonya on the telephone. Like Jepson, he was feeling rather overwhelmed by his responsibilities. It was a relief to hear Sonya's deep, colorful voice.

"Didn't know you were here till just now," he told her. "I'm coming to see you in the morning. I want to talk to you about a lot of things."

"Including Mrs. Ordway?" suggested Sonya.

"Yes. You saw her today. You noticed—"

"Of course. Samuel is to be operated on tomorrow. I'll send him back to Devon House with his mother in a few days, as soon as he can safely travel, and I shall stay right here."

"That's splendid of you!"

"It's what Barbara and Mr. Warren would wish. And Mrs. Ordway, too, I think, though she would never suggest it."

"I'm sure it is."

Laurie hung up the receiver with a nervous hand. To a youth of twenty-four it is a somewhat overpowering experience to discover that destiny is especially busy over the affairs of two women for whom he has assumed a definite responsibility. As he turned from the instrument its bell again compelled his attention. He took up the receiver, and the voice of a girl came to his ear. A week or two ago he had rather liked that voice and its owner, a gay, irresponsible, good-hearted little creature who pranced in the front row of an uptown pony ballet. Now he listened to it with keen distaste.

"Hello, Laurie," it twittered. "Is that you? This is Billie. Listen. I gotta plan. A bunch of us is goin' out to Gedney to supper tonight. We're goin' to leave right after the show. Are you on?"

Laurie got rid of the fair Billie. He did it courteously but very firmly. A rather unusual degree of firmness was necessary, for Miss Billie was not used to having her invitations refused. She accepted the phenomenon with acute unwillingness and very lingeringly.

Bangs was not at home, to divert his chum's mind with his robust conversation. As he dressed for his call on Doris, the sharp contrasts of life struck Laurie with the peculiar force with which they hit the young and the inexperienced.

But were they really contrasts? On the one side were Louise, dying, and Doris, seemingly eager to die. On the other were Billie and her friends—foolish little butterflies, enjoying their brief hour in the secret garden of life, eternally chattering about "good times," playing they were happy, perhaps even thinking they were happy, but infinitely more tragic figures than Louise and Doris. Yet a week ago he had thought they amused him!

Pondering on these and other large problems, he absently removed the bloom from three fresh white ties.

CHAPTER VII

Griggs Gets an Order.

At eight o'clock Laurie found Doris sitting under the shade of a reading-lamp in her studio, deep in the pages of a sophisticated French novel and radiating an almost oppressive atmosphere of well-being.

Subconsciously, he resented this. His mood was keyed to tragedy. But he returned her half-serious, half-mocking smile with one as enigmatic, shook hands with grave formality, and surveyed with mild interest a modest heap of bank-notes of small denominations that lay on the table, catching the room's high lights. Following his glance, Doris nodded complacently.

"I left them there for you to see," she remarked.

"Did the kind gentleman under the three balls give you all that?"

"He did. Count it."

Laurie frowned.

"Don't be so arrogant about your wealth. It's fleeting. Any copy-book will tell you so."

She opened a small drawer in the table, swept the bills into it, and casually closed it. Laurie stared.

"Are you going to leave it there? Just like that?"

She looked patient.

"Why not?"

"I begin to understand why you are sometimes financially cramped."

He took the bills, smoothed them out flat, rolled back the rug to the edge of the table, laid the money under it, and carefully replaced the rug.

"That's the place to put it," he observed, with satisfaction. "No one connected with a studio ever lifts a rug. Bangs and I used to throw our money under the furniture, and pick it up as we needed it; but others sometimes reached it first. This way is better. How lovely you look!" he added. As he spoke he comfortably seated himself on the other side of the reading-lamp, and moved the lamp to a point where it would not obstruct his view of her.

She did look lovely. She had put on an evening gown, very simply made, but rich in the Oriental coloring she loved. She was like Louise in that. Laurie's thoughts swung to the latter's sick-room, and his brilliant young face grew somber. The girl lounging in the big chair observed the sudden change in his expression. She pushed a box of cigarettes toward him.

"Smoke if you like," she said, indifferently. "All my friends do."

He caught the phrase. Then she had friends!

"Including Herbert Ransome Shaw?" he asked, as he lit a match.

"Don't include him among my friends! But—he was here this afternoon."

"He was!" In his rising interest Laurie nearly let the match go out. "What did he want?"

"To warn me to have nothing to do with you."

"I like his infernal cheek!"

Laurie lit the cigarette and puffed at it savagely. Then, rising, he drew his chair forward and sat down facing her.

"See here," he said quietly, "you'd better tell me the whole story. I can't help you much if I'm kept in the dark. But if you'll let me into things—And before I forget it," he interrupted himself to interject, "I want to bring a friend of mine to call on you. She will be a tower of strength. She's a Russian, and one of the best women I know."

She listened with a slight smile.

"What's her name?"

"Miss Orleneff, Sonya Orleneff, a great pal of my sister's and an all-round good sort. I'd like to bring her in tomorrow afternoon. Will five be convenient?"

"No." She spoke now with the curtness of the morning. "In no circumstances," she added, decisively.

"But—why?"

He was dazed. If ever a knight errant worked under greater difficulties than these, Laurie told himself, he'd like to know the poor chap's name.

"I have no wish to meet Miss Orleneff."

"But she's an ideal person for you to know, experienced, sympathetic, and understanding. She did a lot for my sister last year. I must tell you all about that sometime. She could do more for you—"

"Mr. Devon!" The finality of her tone brought him up short. "We must understand each other."

"I should like nothing better." He, too, was suddenly formal.

"This morning you projected yourself into my life."

"Literally," he cordially agreed.

"I am grateful to you for what you did and what you wish to do. But I will not meet any more strangers. I will not meet Miss Orleneff, or any one else. Is that clear?"

"Oh, perfectly!" Laurie sighed. "Of course you're a crowned head," he mused aloud. "I had forgotten. Would you like my head on a charger, or anything like that?"

She studied him thoughtfully.

"Almost from the first," she said, "and except for an occasional minute or two, you have refused to be serious. That interests me. Why is it? Aren't you willing to realize that there are real troubles in the world, terrible troubles, that the bravest go down under?"

"Of course." He was serious now. He had begun to realize that fully. "It's my unfortunate manner, I suppose," he defended himself. "I've never taken anything seriously for very long. It's hard to form the habit, all of a sudden."

"You will have to take me seriously."

He made a large gesture of acceptance.

"All right," he promised. "That brings us back to where we were. Tell me the truth. If there's anything in it that really menaces you, you'll find me serious enough."

Before answering, she rose and opened the studio door, on which, he observed with approval, a strong new lock and an inside bolt had already been placed. He saw her peer up and down the hall. Then she closed and bolted the door, and returned to her chair. The precaution brought before him a mental vision of Herbert Ransome Shaw prowling about the dim corridor. He spoke incredulously.

"Are you really afraid of that chap?"

"I have good reason to be," she said quietly. She sat down in her chair again, rested her elbows on the table and her chin in her hands, in the pose already so familiar to him, and added quietly, "He is the source of all my present trouble."

She stopped and turned her head to listen.

"Do you hear anything moving in the hall?" she asked, almost in a whisper.

"No. Shall I look?"

She shook her head. "Don't unbolt the door."

"You're nervous. I'm sure there's nothing there. Please go on," he urged. "Our little friend Bertie—"

Seeing her expression, he stopped short. "Forgive me," he said, humbly. "But the plain truth is, it's awfully hard for me to take that fellow seriously. Oh, I know he's venomous," he conceded, "but I can't help feeling that he hasn't as much power over you as you think he has."

He realized that she was listening, but not to him.

"There is some one outside that door!" she whispered.

Laurie leaped to the door as noiselessly as a cat, unbolted it, and flung it open. The hall was empty. He had an instantaneous impression that something as silent as a moving shadow had vanished around the staircase at the far end, but when he reached the spot he saw nothing save the descending iron spirals of successive stairways. He returned to his companion, smiling reassuringly.

"It's our nerves," he said. "In a few minutes more I shall be worrying about Bertie, myself."

"Bolt the door again," she directed. He obeyed. She went on as if there had been no interruption to their talk. "It isn't what he is," she admitted. "He himself is nothing, as you say. It's what is back of him that—that frightens me! Why don't you smoke?" she interrupted herself to ask.

Laurie automatically selected and lit another cigarette.

"I know what's going to be back of Bertie pretty soon," he darkly predicted. "Whoever he is, and whatever he is doing, he has a big jolt coming to him, and it's coming fast."

He laid down the cigarette and turned to her with his most charming expression, a wonderfully sweet smile, half shy, wholly boyish. Before this look, any one who loved Laurence Devon was helpless.

"Come," he said gently, "tell me the whole story. You know it's not curiosity that makes me ask. But how can I help you when I'm working in the dark?"

As she hesitated, his brilliant eyes, so softened now, continued to hold hers.

"And I want to help you," he added. "I want that privilege more than I want anything else in the world."

For a long moment she sat still, as if considering his words, her eyes on her hands, folded in her lap. The strange, deep flush he had noticed once before again stained her face. At last she straightened up with a quick movement, throwing back her shoulders as if to take on again some burden they had almost cast off.

"I am sorry to seem so mysterious," she said, "and so unresponsive. I will tell you this much, and it is more than I ought to say. In the situation we are in I am in his power, horribly so. He can crush me at any time he chooses."

"Then why doesn't he?"

The gentleness of her caller's voice softened the brusqueness of his words.

"Because—" She stopped again. For the first time she had become embarrassed and self-conscious. She made her climax in a rush: "Lately he insists that he has fallen in love with me!"

Laurie uttered an ejaculation. It was not a pretty one, but it nicely fitted the emergency.

"He has hoped that to save myself, and others, I will marry him, the contemptible, crawling snake!"

The listener was impressed by her comparison. Certainly there was something ophidian about Shaw. He himself had noticed it.

"Then, for the time being, you're really safe?" he suggested.

"No. His patience is exhausted. He is beginning to realize that I'd rather die."

Laurie gets the idea that the police ought to be notified, but Doris warns him that would spoil everything.

Long Trail of Trees

A tree trail, 500 miles long, stretches across the bleak Alaskan hills as a tribute to the native's ingenuity. The trail was made by setting willow posts, which took root and grew into trees. Every now and then along the route native characters and English words denote distances from various camps and villages.

History is, after all, a crystallization of popular beliefs.—Platt.

POULTRY FACTS

PULLETS VERSUS HENS FOR EGGS

It is commonly believed that well-matured pullets will produce more eggs than hens a year older. How much more has been studied by the Maine department station. The results of this study add strength to the emphasis on pullets as egg producers.

The records covering several years and a considerable number of flocks show that pullets produced about 40 per cent more eggs than they did in their second year of laying. Not only was the production larger but the greater per cent were laid during the period of high prices. That is, properly handled, matured pullets will produce more of the eggs during the winter months the first year than they will the second year of egg production.

Another factor in favor of keeping as high a per cent as possible of pullet producers in the egg factory is the higher death rate that comes with each added year of age. Aside from contagious diseases that are no respectors of age, the deaths among mature birds mount rapidly after the first year; more rapidly among the American breeds than the Mediterranean, probably.

These three reasons should boost close culling of the farm flock during the summer and fall. Keeping any hen after the close of the second laying year is generally poor policy unless she is of proved value as a member of the breeding pen.

Conditions on most farms favor the disposal of a high per cent of the hens in order to give the pullets adequate room for development. More pullets and hens kept than the houses and facilities warrant are ten times more frequent than a small flock that the housing and equipment justifies.

Mash Feed Is Important for Production of Eggs

"A large mash consumption is necessary for the maximum number of eggs," says R. E. Cray, extension specialist in poultry at the Ohio State university. Therefore, it will pay to induce the hens to eat as much mash as possible. One suggestion that Mr. Cray makes is that the grain be fed only in the evening, which will cause the hens to eat more of the mash than they otherwise would.

Plenty of space at the mash hoppers is also recommended as another means of bringing about larger consumption of mash. Timid hens will be crowded away if the space around the hoppers is small. One foot of hopper space is suggested for every five hens.

If the mash is moistened with milk occasionally, the hens will appreciate the variety and will eat large quantities.

Late Molters Best Layers

In culling a flock, it is first necessary that something be known about the kind and regularity of the feed, the housing conditions and the care the birds have received. It is well known that improper feed, housing or care can easily throw a flock into an early molt. The time that a hen goes through her molt will be a good indication of her ability as an egg producer. Those that molt late in the fall are usually the best layers.

Poultry Hints

Dirty eggs cost the farmers millions of dollars a year.

• • •

Turkeys of good breeding—that is, pure-bred stock—are always in good demand for breeding.

• • •

Even when ducks and geese have a sand run it is well to put about 1 per cent in the mash once aday.

• • •

Do not keep longer the old hens which have ceased to lay and have gone into a molt. With very few exceptions, they are not high producers.

• • •

The late hatched chicks neither add to your average egg production nor increase the vitality of the flock.

• • •

For profitable and effective poultry production the feeder should never fill the trough with more feed than will be consumed before the next feeding period.

• • •

Ground chess and wheat screenings is heavy feed, and care must be taken not to feed too much of it. Pound for pound, it will take the place of most other grains.

• • •

In order to succeed with turkeys it is necessary to start with strong, vigorous birds.

• • •

The best turkeys for breeding are those two years old or older, as a turkey is never at her best until that age.

• • •

For a flock that is kept penned up, this is an excellent egg-making feed to give two or three times a week: chopped or ground alfalfa steamed until soft, and mixed with cornmeal, wheat middlings and bran.

• • •

Be careful with the turkeys. If you frighten them now you may not be able to catch those you want for Thanksgiving.

• • •

The processes of digestion of the hen are comparatively slow. This is particularly true when whole grain is fed.

• • •

Listen to the guineas. The one with the peculiar note like "come back" "come back" or as some people interpret it: "buckwheat, buckwheat," is the female.

CENSUS REVEALS ASTONISHING FACT

8,549,511 Working Women in United States

Many Say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps Keep Them Fit to Work

8,549,511 women would be a vast army. According to the 1920 Census of Manufactures, that is the number of women and girls employed in all trades in the United States.

Napoleon said, "An army travels on its stomach." This army of women travels on its general health. Every working girl knows that time lost through illness seldom is paid for and seldom can be made up. Employers demand regularity. If she wants to keep her job or hope for a better one, she must guard her health.

Atlanta, Ga.—"My system was weak and run-down, and I was thin. I was this way for five years or more. I read your advertisement in the papers and I decided to try your medicine, the Vegetable Compound, but I did not begin to take it regularly until after I was married. I got so much good from it that I am fine and have gained in weight. I work in a broom shop, but my work is not so hard on me now, as I keep my own house, and work in garden, too. I am telling all my friends of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it has helped me."—Mrs. W. M. Bailey, R. F. D. No. 5, Box 27, Atlanta, Georgia.

Missouri Woman Helped

Parkville, Mo.—"I am proud to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was so ill that I could not lie down at night. Then I got my husband to go to the store and buy me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I was up and around before the first bottle was gone, although I only weighed ninety pounds. I took six or eight bottles and was able to do all my housework, washing and ironing, take care of my five boys, and went to my chickens and garden, which before I had to hire my washing as part of my housework."—Mrs. Anna Cole, R. HUGGINS FINDS GEHRIG USEFUL

Columbia Player Fills Big Gap at Initial Sack

You can't freeze Lou Gehrig of the New York Americans in winter, and perhaps that is why he is so cool in summer when he faces the best pitchers of his circuit and gets hits off all comers.

Gehrig, a New Yorker, spends his winters at home. Even with the temperature at zero, Gehrig never wears an overcoat. He never wears a vest. At an early age, Gehrig swore a vendetta against both. No wonder he is so self-possessed against pitchers. Any man who can buck New York winter temperatures and cold, biting winds without an overcoat cannot be disturbed by a mere pitcher.

Miller Huggins picked up Gehrig from Columbia university several years ago. Gehrig, as a collegian, was a southpaw pitcher, also performed in the outfield and had some vagrant experience at first base. When Lou came to the Yankees, Huggins refused to waste Gehrig's potential power as a batter and decided to groom him to succeed Wallie Pipp at first base.

It was necessary for Gehrig to see some service other than on the Yankees bench. Therefore, Huggins sent him to an Eastern league club. In 1925, Gehrig went South with the Lou "Buster" Gehrig.

New York team, ripe enough to stay. When Wallie Pipp showed signs of fading, Gehrig went in. This year he was the regular first baseman from the start.

Pitchers united in saying that Gehrig is as dangerous a batter as there is in the circuit. Some hate to see him come up there for Lou partial to home runs and other varieties of extra base hits, any dimension of which is likely to break up a ball game if there are runners on base. Lou has a distressing habit, so far as the rival clubs are concerned, of busting one when runs are in the offing.

Brown-Eyed Persons Are Leaders at Golf Game

Golf instructors rather generally hold the view that brown-eyed persons play better golf than blue-eyed and gray-eyed persons.

John Ball, who probably has won more championships than any other golfer, has brown eyes. James Braid, Harry Vardon, Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones, Abe Mitchell and Cyril Tolley also are brown-eyed. The two great golfers among women, Miss Joyce Wethered and Miss Cecil Leitch, also have brown eyes.

Strong eyes are indispensable to golf, and players who are able to see well in a strong wind without having tears come into their eyes and who do not suffer from the glare of the sun have a great advantage.

But oculists fail to agree that brown eyes are necessarily stronger and better eyes for golf than those of other colors.

Chester I. Mead Modest as Iowa Football Star

The name of Chester I. Mead, who is Iowa line coach, stands beside that of Devine, Locke, Brookins and Laude as one of the most modest Hawkeye athletes. He was guard on the championship football teams of 1921 and 1922, and was so modest that he did not mind if credit for playing all of the classic Yale game went to another man.

Press reports from New Haven after that 6 to 0 Iowa victory carried the name of Kriz, a substitute in the Hawkeye lineup at the right guard position. When, on the Monday after the game, the Hawkeyes, heroes of the campus, returned to Iowa City, Mead was asked why he didn't play.

"I played all of the game," was his reply. "But what's the use of mentioning it as long as some man was in there doing the work."

Big Bill Edwards Is a Real Football Veteran

Bill Edwards, president of the American league of professional football clubs, who has been in the game since 1896, when a freshman at Princeton, where he was captain of the varsity in 1899, and who for years was a leading official of the East, has put the burden of playing clean football squarely up to his teams. "The traditions of football are old and sacred," Edwards says. "I shall have no pity for the player who shows any evidence of hurting football by his action on or off the field. See to it that you keep yourself above criticism."

Golf Hard on Nerves

Golf is a harder strain on the nervous system than tennis is. There is more time to ponder the situation. There is much greater physical strain in tennis, but the rush of the game absorbs a big part of the nervous pressure. But in golf there are nearly two minutes between strokes. Since golf is largely a game of nerve repression, there is a greater nerve weariness at the end of a match than almost any game known. Yet the game retains its popularity.

VOGUE FOR VELVET REIGNS; RICHLY FURRED CLOTH COAT

IT IS a velvet-inspired world in which milady finds herself this season. Velvet for frocks, velvet for wraps, velvet for hats and velvet even for shoes—thus has the enchantment of velvet completely captured the mode. And now that the woman of fashion is to be velvet enrobed, she is asked to take her choice between regal dress of velvet all-black which shall scintillate with rhinestone embellishment, or frocks whose color-glory declares that "beauty unadorned is adorned the most."

Color, ever of irresistible appeal, reaches a climax of lovelliness in the supple-as-chiffon velvets, which are just now proving such a delight to the stylist. Simplicity is the keynote of the charming velvet dress in the picture. Ample width and irregular hemline is achieved through shirring at the side which is caught at the waist, giving a touch of blouseness. Nearly every other evening frock has a suggestion of pink in its effect. This particular gown is in a refined dull rose.

Simplicity the Keynote of This Gown.

Leading in lustrous chiffon velvets are the fuchsia and red tones; especially is the fashionist exploiting the new eggplant color. Pinkish beige is another favorite hue and many young girls are choosing pale blue for their evening frocks of velvet. However, select any color and you will make no mistake for the new velvets present a galaxy of rainbow shades. A pleasing theme is the frock of one shade of velvet worn under an evening wrap of velvet in darker shade.

Clever manipulation of fabrics is the stylist's joy and pride in creating new modes, and especially in velvet is adroit handling of the material featured. The dainty supple lightweight character of modern velvet yields gracefully to generous shirring and the smartest gowns and wraps make profuse use of this treatment.

For the black velvet frock, yokes and sleeves, especially the latter of real lace or black chantilly, also gold lace are the latest style touch.

Outstanding style prestige is bespoken for the lavishly furred cloth coat. Not only the luxuriousness of the fur itself, but the novelty in its placement on the coat adds enthusiasm to the vogue.

Up-and-down the front fur trimmings characterize this season's modes, rather than the hem borderings which were so universal last winter. The new trend is expressed in huge collars which develop into revers which extend down each side of the front to the very hemline. The ultra-smart woolen coat in the picture, which is luxuriously furred in wolf, carries out the front-opening trimming in a conspicuously unique way, by extending the collar into revers which form a triangular section at each corner. The sleeve also emphasizes the tendency toward very deep fur cuff effects, reaching half way up the arm. The importance of fantastic fur cuffs on cloth coats is one of the really new features of the mode. In accord with fashion's command the shoes which are worn with this sumptuous coat together with the purse which this smartly attired woman is carrying, all harmonize.

Most every sort of fur is used to trim the worsted coat. It is this extensive variety of furs together with the beauty of the woolens they trim which is competing with the all-fur coat for honors. New arrivals among smooth furs embellishing the cloth coats stress beige and white spotted calfskin, pony and unshaved lamb. Long-haired furs emphasize red fox, also wolf dyed to blend with the cloaking it trims. Quite a few coats show a lining of spotted leopard either real or simulating the genuine.

Contrasting the flair for showy colorful furs, is the vogue recently predicted for all-black fur on all-black cloth or velvet coats. Mole and seal are also counted among fashionable fur trims.

Diamond Earrings

The smartest jewels to wear with an evening frock of black chiffon are long diamond earrings, which may be as fantastic in design as the wearer desires.

Fall Coats

Features of the fall coats are the fur collar, the set-in or the kimono sleeve, the tight hip line and the narrow belt with buckle, and also pockets.

Crepe Satin

The fad for using both sides of crepe satin has produced street and afternoon dresses of elegant simplicity. No other trimming is needed than the contrast in surfaces.

Velvet Tam

Hat crowns grow higher as the season advances, and the number of folds and creases also multiplies. It is said that the velvet tam will have its inning.

Popular San Diego Woman Recovers From Long Illness

Amazing Improvement in Mrs. Jester's Health Surprises Friends. Serious Ailments Caused by Nervous Breakdown Relieved and Strength Restored by Tanlac. Looks and Feels Better Than Ever

"Tanlac has certainly done wonders for me; I cannot praise it enough," declares Mrs. T. D. Jester, 1268 Pennsylvania Avenue, San Diego, Calif. "I had suffered a nervous breakdown, and for many months afterward I continued to get worse and worse, despite all the different nerve medicines I tried. Nothing seemed to help until I tried Tanlac.

"I was as near to being a complete nervous and physical wreck as I could be, without entirely collapsing. The slightest noise would make me want to scream, and after retiring it would be hours before I could sleep. I would awaken with terrible nervous headaches and the slightest exertion would tire me out so that I would be trembling. I lost weight and appetite. I tried Tanlac with little expectation of improvement.

"Before I had taken all of the first bottle, I developed a ravenous appetite, and was sleeping better. I continued to improve rapidly and felt like a different person entirely. In less than three weeks I had gained seven pounds! Later, my weight went up from 105 to 125 pounds."

If your troubles are similar to those from which Mrs. Jester suffered so keenly, get relief before it is too late! Tanlac will doubtless help you just as it helped Mrs. Jester—and as it has helped thousands of other sufferers.

Tanlac is a pure and wholesome compound, made from herbs, roots and barks, according to the famous Tanlac formula. It is a wonderful tonic medicine, for run-down and nervous conditions and for digestive disorders. All good druggists sell Tanlac—get your first bottle today! Over 40 million bottles sold.

Fatal Boomerang Duel

The practice of dueling is not confined to the countries of Europe, but is an ancient custom among the native tribes of Australia. Although most Binghi altercations end tamely with little damage done to either party, a Sydney Bulletin correspondent witnessed one in Queensland when two young natives quarreled over a girl, and agreed to settle possession by combat. Armed with half a dozen boomerangs each, they stood about thirty yards apart, and at a signal commenced dodging about and throwing. Though both men were furiously angry, temper did not affect their accuracy, each scoring four hits, each hit inflicting a cut in the flesh. The duel lasted about two minutes and when the last boomerang was thrown both men were on the ground. Efforts were made to aid them to recovery but both died within a few hours.

C. of C. In Interesting Session

The Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce held an interesting meeting Monday night at which all the claims filed after the incorporation election some months ago were ordered paid, although the chamber was in no way obligated to defray them. The members felt that the creditors acted in good faith and should be paid by some one. A committee from the Menlo Park Improvement Association appeared before the chamber in reference to the street lighting sign "Menlo Park" to be placed across the highway at the junction of Santa Cruz avenue. The association tentatively promised to appropriate the sum of $200 to the cause and the committee asked a similar sum from the chamber of commerce. The request was referred to the Ways and Means committee of the chamber to act. A whist party was arranged to take place on November 23 in Duff and Doyle hall, the proceeds to go towards securing the Menlo Theatre on Christmas eve, or thereabouts, for a free entertainment for all the children of Menlo Park. The cause is a very worthy one that should receive every encouragement. The prizes on that evening will consist of turkeys. Come to the party, secure a turkey and thus aid a splendid cause.
